Calgary is the safest city in Canada's west

Issues. Under-reporting of crime and abuse of children areas of concern for police

JEREMY NOLAIIS

jeremy.nolais@metronews.ca

Rates of serious crime plummeted in Calgary last year, leading police to suggest our city is the safest in Western Canada.

Statistics Canada released its annual crime report Tuesday and highlighted a 14 per cent drop for Calgary on the Crime Severity Index, which takes a number of police-reported factors into account to award each Canadian municipality a rating.

Calgary's drop was bettered only by Victoria (17 percent), and the city now stands below every other Western Canadian city when it comes to instances of non-violent crime.

"We do a lot with the resources we have," said police spokesperson Kevin Brookwell. "I think you are seeing the results in this report, now's not the time to back off."

But while the numbers are promising, they don't tell the whole story as Brookwell said studies indicate more than one-third of crimes go unreported.

As well, Calgary, along with much of the country, continues to see a rise in reported violence and abuse against children.

The latter stat came as no surprise to Glori Meldrum, founder of Alberta sexual-abuse support group Little Warriors.

"This is an epidemic.... We have only touched the surface of this issue," she said before estimating 95 per cent of sexual-abuse victims she has assisted did not report the incidents to police.

Calgary police have nearly doubled the manpower working in the child-abuse unit over the past year and will be in attendance to break ground on a new advocacy centre devoted to youngsters on Wednesday.

Highway 63

More officers to patrol deadly highway to oilsands region

The Alberta government hopes more police will reduce the carnage on a dangerous highway that is the main road to the oilsands region in the Fort McMurray area.

The province says it will assign 16 more sheriffs and RCMP to patrol Highway 63 by next year, including four officers by the end of next month. The province said it will also install electric digital signs that will show how fast people are driving.

"I don't know that everybody who gets a ticket appreciates it, but everybody that goes up and down the road safely and gets back to their family or their jobs safely — I'm sure they appreciate it," Transportation Minister Ric McIver said Tuesday.

The move is in response to recommendations in a government-commissioned report into the high number of fatal and serious collisions on the highway.

Alberta Premier Alison Redford asked for the report following protests for the government to fast-track twinning of the road dubbed the "Highway of Death."

The primary stretch of road linking Edmonton to Fort McMurray has seen hundreds of crashes, many with serious injuries and deaths. In April, two children and a pregnant woman were among seven people killed in a fiery head-on collision.

"We are very focused on ensuring that we are putting everything in place with respect to traffic safety and enforcement that is going to allow for a freer flow of traffic and a safer flow of traffic," Redford said at a pancake breakfast in Edmonton.

Advocates slam plan to recruit strippers from city high schools

Visa issue. Deportation of foreign workers sees need for hundreds of dancers in Alberta alone, says association

jeremy.nolais@metronews.ca

Calgary high school students will be targeted as part of a massive recruiting blitz to repopulate Canadian stripper ranks, says an industry association.

That claim drew fire from a number of Calgary education advocates Tuesday.

The Adult Entertainment Association of Canada, which represents nearly 40,000 strippers, says a new decision by the federal government to refrain from issuing temporary visas or extensions for foreign strippers working here will cut their workforce by five per cent.

Organization head Tim Lambrinos said that, to replace those dancers, his group will push to be featured at job fairs in high schools, colleges and universities.

"They (federal representatives) are trying to destroy the industry and what it seems is young women between 18 to 19 have been untouched," he said.

But Calgary Board of Education trustees Joy Bowen-Eyre, who has children in the public school system, said such a move would be inappropriate in public schools, especially given that Recruiters for strip clubs across Canada, including those in Calgary, will turn their attention to young women attending high school and post-secondary institutions, an industry association says. EDUARDO VERDUGO/THE ASSOCIATED PRESS so few children are at the age of majority.

"There's a lot of things that kids can do in terms of a career ... or in terms of a career pathway without having to take their clothes off," she added.

Lambrinos said, however, it's not a publicly funded school's place to discriminate between various job types, noting the strip clubs are a legal business enterprise in Canada.

His group also plans to target students attending universities and colleges across the nation, advising that stripping is a great part-time job to raise tuition funds.

Jeff Bowes, president of the Calgary Association of Parents and School Councils, deemed Lambrinos' plan a "publicity stunt" and doubted a single Canadian school board would partner with a strip club.

Not an option

- Calgary Catholic School District spokesperson Janet Corsten said that allowing strip clubs to recruit in their high schools "is not something we would consider."
- Inquiries made to Calgary strip clubs for comment Tuesday were not returned.

Pipeline fuels war of words between Alberta, B.C. premiers

Northern Gateway pipeline. Rhetoric increased as premiers gather in Halifax for annual meeting

British Columbia Premier Christy Clark is unmoved by Alberta's apparent refusal to entertain her province's demands for a bigger share of the benefits and a smaller share of the risks involved in the proposed Northern Gateway pipeline project.

"If Alberta doesn't sit down and talk about it, the project can't go ahead. It's as simple as that," Clark said Tuesday.

The rhetoric on both sides of the issue has increased a day before provincial and territorial leaders gather in Halifax for the annual Council of the Federation meeting.

Clark has taken the firm stand that five conditions must be met for B.C. to even consider the Enbridge project, which will carry crude from Alberta to a port on the West Coast for shipment to Asia.

Alberta Premier Alison Redford expressed disappointment in Clark's comments on Tuesday morning, and has said B.C. would "fundamentally change confederation" by demanding increased compensation.

"That means every single time that you have an economic project or a commercial project there has to be a new negotiation of the balance sheet," she told reporters. "It's not how Canada has worked, it's not how Canada has succeeded and I'm disappointed to hear the comments."

But Clark said Alberta must either work with her to rebalance the equation or B.C. won't buy in.

"I am going to fight for this, for British Columbia," she said.

Teddie for a Toonie. Donation helps fund kids' cancer treatment

A $310,000 gift to the Alberta Children's Hospital will help kids fight cancer.

ATB Financial announced the donation on Tuesday through the Teddy for a Toonie campaign. The hospital has earmarked the funds for a groundbreaking new program called Hospital at Home, which aims to minimize the strain of ongoing hospital visits for pediatric cancer patients.

"Reducing stress, decreasing the number of trips to the hospital and increasing the quality of life for the families are all goals of the Hospital at Home program," said pediatric nurse practitioner Jennifer Giles.

Hospital at Home is a pilot project, the first of its kind in North America. The "game-changing" service will target a certain group of oncology patients and offer chemotherapy drug administration, some routine blood work and central line care at home, Giles said.

After his two-year-old son managed to select a very adult program on satellite TV, Mike Lowe, president of Kidoodle.TV, said he saw a gap in the market.

Kidoodle.TV will operate in a similar way to Netflix but with a focus on children's programming, giving parents more control over what kids are watching.

This year, the talented cast of Summerstock and Westmount Charter School will present the hit Broadway play, Legally Blonde: The Musical.

"It is really nice when we can do a show and it not just behind a closed door, but open to the public," says Jim Senft, artistic director of Summerstock.

Seventy of "the best and the brightest" from over 20 different institutions from across Canada, aged 15 to 20, have come together to take part in Calgary's only outdoor musical theatre company that uses student performers.

"There is a passion in high school kids because they love so much what they are doing and it is really incredible to see," says Senft.

Musical theatre tickets

Tickets are available through Ticketmaster for $15. Walk-up tickets are also available for $12 (remaining seats).

For Sydney Montieth, 15, to land the lead role as Elle Woods has been a highlight in her career.

"Getting the experience of playing a lead role is huge and I love this character," says Montieth.

Montieth attends Cochrane High School and hopes to move into a career in music after graduating.

All proceeds from ticket sales go toward student scholarships.

The families of those killed in the Colorado theatre massacre planned their final goodbyes Tuesday, their anger stirred by the sight of suspect James Holmes in court with dyed orange hair and glassy eyes.

Robert Blache watched footage from Holmes' court appearance with his injured daughter Christina, who was shot in both legs. "He doesn't look surprised at any of it, but he seemed amazed at what was happening. I'm pretty sure he's not sane," Blache said.

After Holmes was led back to solitary confinement, victims' families were left to plan funerals for as early as Friday.

At least three men accused of making threats during or after watching the new Batman movie have been arrested in separate incidents. Moviegoers in Arizona panicked when a man who appeared intoxicated was confronted during a showing of the movie. About 50 people fled the theatre.

A Maine man was arrested when he told authorities that he was on his way to shoot a former employer a day after watching The Dark Knight Rises. The man had been stopped for speeding, and a police search found an AK-47 assault weapon, four handguns, ammunition and news clippings about the mass shooting.

In California, a man was arrested after witnesses said he made threats and alluded to the shooting when the movie didn't start.

Police were also called to a cinema in Norwalk, Calif., after moviegoers said Clark Tabor shouted: "I should go off like in Colorado."

Fleece. 'Goat Man' spotted among wild herd in Utah

Kidding around? Man said he is preparing for archery hunt next year

State wildfire officials have identified a man who has been spotted dressed in a goat suit among a herd of wild goats in the mountains of northern Utah.

Phil Douglass of the Utah Division of Wildlife Resources said Monday the mystery man is a 57-year-old hunter from Southern California.

Douglass said that the hunter called officials and provided enough information to put their curiosity to rest. Douglass says he didn't ask for a name.

The man told Douglass he

The man described his suit as a hooded painter's uniform and a fleece. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Goat-hunting season nears

Wildlife officials are worried "Goat Man" could be in danger as hunting season approaches.

- Phil Douglass of the Utah Division of Wildlife Resources said the person is doing nothing illegal, but he worries the so-called Goat Man is unaware of the dangers.

- "My very first concern is the person doesn't understand the risks," Douglass said. "Who's to say what could happen."

La Gioconda's lo scheletro?

Researcher Silvia Gori works inside the Sant'Orsola monastery in Florence, Italy, Tuesday. Archeologists found a skeleton buried inside the monastery that could belong to Lisa Gherardini, the first model of Leonardo da Vinci's Mona Lisa painting. Lisa Gherardini was the wife of a silk merchant called Francesco del Giocondo (in fact, Italians refer to the Mona Lisa as la Gioconda). According to art historian Giorgio Vasari, del Giocondo commissioned Leonardo to paint a portrait of his wife. Leonardo took about 15 years to complete what was to become one of the most famous paintings in the world.

A woman who calls herself the "Black Madam" is facing murder charges in Philadelphia stemming from the death of a tourist from London who received an illegal buttocks-enhancing procedure.

Padge Winslowe, 42, was charged in the February 2011 death of Claudia Aderotimi, 20, following a series of silicone injections performed at a hotel near Philadelphia International Airport.

Winslowe, who police said uses multiple aliases, was arraigned Tuesday on charges of third-degree murder, conspiracy, reckless endangerment, possessing an instrument of crime and unauthorized prac-

Targeting a killer: 150 groups seek a global ban on asbestos

A $58-million provincial loan and private investment could keep the Jeffrey open-pit mine in Asbestos, Que., operating for years, opponents say.

JACQUES BOISSINOT/THE CANADIAN PRESS

Quebec assailed. Its $58-million loan called a 'shameful display of disregard for science' by Colin Soskolne, one of those backing a ban

A global ban on asbestos was demanded Tuesday by more than 150 international and Canadian organizations and individual scientists.

The call for the ban comes after last month's announcement by the Quebec government that it would lend $58 million to help reopen the Jeffrey mine in Asbestos.

"The science is clear that all forms of asbestos cause ill health and premature death," said Colin Soskolne, a professor in the School of Public Health at the University of Alberta and one of those calling for the ban.

"According to the World Health Organization, over 107,000 people die each year from working with asbestos of any type," added Soskolne. Asbestos opponents are urging major producers — Brazil, Canada, Kazakhstan and Russia — to put an end to mining and exports and help communities make the transition to a different industry.

"This immoral practice of exporting it, particularly to developing countries when we refuse to use it at home, is immoral and unacceptable to people in the field of public health," Soskolne said in a telephone interview.

Iraq. More attacks follow deadliest day in 2 years

Bomb attacks in Iraq killed nine people Tuesday, officials said, a bloody aftershock to the country's deadliest day in two years that followed the declaration of a new al-Qaida offensive.

Police said an explosives-rigged motorcycle killed six Kurdish intelligence officials on a late afternoon security patrol in the northeast town of Tuz Khormato, located 210 kilometers north of Baghdad.

A local medic confirmed the deaths. Both officials spoke on condition of anonymity because they were not authorized to release the information.

Regime targets commercial capital

With warplanes circling overhead, Syrian attack helicopters pounded rebel-held neighbourhoods in Aleppo Tuesday in an escalation of the battle for the country's commercial capital and largest city, residents said. Following a pair of rebel assaults on the country's two main cities and a bombing that wiped out some of his top security advisers, President Bashar Assad on Tuesday reshuffled his top intelligence posts, dismissing one general and appointing a new national security council chief to replace the one killed in the blast. Borisov says the suicide bomber in last week's bus attack acted with accomplices

A sophisticated group of conspirators was involved in the suicide bombing in Bulgaria that killed five Israeli tourists and a Bulgarian bus driver last week, and they spent about a month in Bulgaria before the attack, the country's prime minister said Tuesday.

Boiko Borisov's comments confirm suspicions that the suicide attacker who targeted a bus filled with Israeli vacationers last Wednesday did not act alone. However, the prime minister didn't say how many people were believed to have been involved in the attack on Israeli tourists in Burgas and also declined to back up Israel's claims that Iran and the militant group Hezbollah played roles.

Those involved used "leased vehicles, they moved in different cities so as not to be seen together, and no two of them can be seen in one place on any security camera," Borisov said, speaking alongside visiting White House counterterrorism chief John Brennan.

He described the people behind the blast as "exceptionally skilled" and said they "observed absolute secrecy." He also said DNA samples from the suicide bomber have been shared with all partner security services, but no match has been found in their databases.

"There was absolutely no chance of preventing such an act of violence," Borisov insisted. "We could have only detected it by chance or if we had been informed by the services that such activities were underway in Bulgaria."

He said officials believe he

"We do not know his identity, but it is known when he has arrived, the presumed flight, where he came from. It could turn out that he entered Bulgaria from a Schengen member country," Borisov said.

Brennan also stopped short of blaming Iran or Hezbollah. He said the U.S. has been working with Bulgaria during its investigation.

European security officials say that images of the attacker have not yet matched any of their databases but that it's possible the man was not on a watch list. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

400 new jobs. Toyota investing $100 million in Cambridge, Ont., plant

Toyota's Canadian manufacturing arm says it's investing $100 million in its Cambridge, Ont., plant — a move that will see it hire 400 workers.

The investment announced Tuesday will increase the production of the company's Lexus RX models, from 30,000 vehicles to 104,000 at the southwestern Ontario facility.

Toyota Canada says the investment includes 15,000 RX450h vehicles, the hybrid electric version of the popular Lexus, and will take its annual production capacity in Canada to 50,000 units.

"For almost nine years now, Canada has had the only Lexus production outside of Japan," Toyota Canada chairman Ray Tanguay said in a release.

"New jobs, along with new technology, is great news for Canada."

Toyota said it is targeting early 2014 for expanded Lexus production.

GM makes $850M R&D investment in Oshawa

Auto announcement.

Workers question whether vehicles that are developed from cash influx will be produced in Canada

GM Canada is investing $850 million in research and development at its complex east of Toronto, an announcement hailed by the prime minister as proof of the automaker's commitment to Canada as it makes good on its bailout commitments, but regarded cautiously by auto workers.

Prime Minister Stephen Harper, who attended the GM announcement in Oshawa, Ont., said the money represents "exciting future implications" with ripple effects that will be felt throughout the economy.

The federal and Ontario governments invested a total of $10.5 billion in GM Canada in 2009 as the automaker struggled to survive the economic downturn.

By the numbers

$1B

GM's $850-million investment came on the same day Toyota pledged $100 million to boost production in Cambridge, Ont., making for nearly $1 billion in auto-sector investment in Ontario in a single day.

The $850-million investment is aimed at meeting R&D spending commitments the automaker made under the bailout.

GM says the investment in R&D at the Canadian Engineering Centre will make the facility an integral part of its global engineering and R&D networks. But the company did not give any specific announcement about whether new jobs would be created.

The money will also go toward enhancing partnerships with automotive suppliers, including "new co-development projects and greater opportunities for start-ups to access funding through GM Ventures." THE CANADIAN PRESS

Economic indicator

Retail sales up in May: StatsCan

More Canadians went shopping in May, driving retail sales up slightly to $38.9 billion.

Statistics Canada says sales rose 0.3 per cent, with gains reported in six of 11 sub-sectors.

Overall, retail sales have been relatively flat since November 2011.

The agency reports that stronger sales of food drove the increase at supermarkets and general-merchandise stores and clothing and accessories sales also rose.

But sales were down in the car industry and at electronic and appliance stores.

StatsCan says retail sales rose in six provinces, with Alberta reporting the largest increase in dollar terms.

LACKLUSTRE OLYMPIC SPIRIT

Paul Sullivan
metronews.ca/justsaying

The Summer Olympics start in a couple of days, but you wouldn't know it here in Vancouver, the city that hosted the most recent Olympics. 2010, remember?

You think they'd fire up the flame one more time in solidarity, but it just sits there overlooking the North Shore mountains, the scene of so many gold-medal triumphs, like a spent Bic, not a flicker.

Even though the Vancouver weather has been reminiscent of the Olympic weather (cold and wet), hardly anyone is wearing the Olympic gear that not so long ago led them to endure daylong lineups in front of the Bay — just for the mittens.

John Furlong, the czar of the 2010 games and the chair of Canada's Own the Podium program, isn't even going to London to cheer on Canada's athletes.

They'll have to own the podium without him, as he says the money will be better spent elsewhere.

Maybe they'll only be able to afford to rent the podium. Time-share?

This apparent lack of Olympic rah-rah is puzzling when you consider the local frenzy whipped up during the 2010 Games. The streets were jammed with millions of people who would stand in line for hours just to get a glimpse of the Olympic torch or to zip-line across Robson Street. They'd stand in front of the mint just to look at an Olympic gold medal. When Sid the Kid scored the goal that won the gold medal for Canada's hockey team, the entire city erupted in a roar that could be heard all the way to Wembley Stadium.

"This apparent lack of Olympic rah-rah is puzzling when you consider the local frenzy whipped up during the 2010 Games."

a glimpse of the Olympic torch or to zip-line across Robson Street. They'd stand in front of the mint just to look at an Olympic gold medal. When Sid the Kid scored the goal that won the gold medal for Canada's hockey team, the entire city erupted in a roar that could be heard all the way to Wembley Stadium.

But now? Not a peep. It's eerie.

Maybe we're Olympicked out. Another one? Already?

Or maybe we're just a Winter Olympics kind of town, though given the daily parade of Lycra-clad cyclists all-out pursuing their personal best, you'd be forgiven for thinking the opposite.

The only thing that hasn't changed between these Games and Vancouver's is the British press. The news is a blood sport in Britain. You'd think it's the Hunger Games the way they gnash their collective chattering teeth about anticipated traffic woes, the stupid mascots, massive security problems, the controversy over a memorial for the Israeli athletes killed in Munich, the food, etc., confidently predicting the worst Olympics ever. Sounds familiar, doesn't it?

Of course, if we get to the podium often enough, it won't matter if we own it, rent it or pawn it.

And if Simon Whitfield wins the triathlon gold, you'll be able to hear the roar all the way to Vancouver.

But for now, it's quiet. Too quiet. Cue the national anthem ...

Well, it looks like somebody is into it. These basketball-team members from Canada jump for joy at the Olympic rings inside the Olympic Village Tuesday in London. SUZANNE PLUNKETT/GETTY IMAGES

Looming over Olympics

Orbit Tower not understood

A security member takes photos at the Orbit observation tower inside Olympic Park in London.

Looming large over the Olympic Stadium, the contorted mass of steel spiralling 115 metres up into the London skies is dividing opinions before the Games have even begun.

The Orbit Tower was conceived as London's answer to the Eiffel Tower in Paris, having already beaten out the French capital to host the 2012 Olympics.

But to what purpose is this crushed, swirling roller-coaster design by sculptors Anish Kapoor and Cecil Balmond?

An observation deck? Maybe a mysterious monument to the Olympics, like the Sphinx to ancient Egypt? Or just a piece of modern art?

From afar, the 2,000-tonne structure resembles the heart of a theme park. But this is Olympic Park — and Britain's biggest-ever piece of public art is, to some, just a complex platform providing vistas of the capital.

Olympic flame goes elsewhere

Steel baron Lakshmi Mittal, whose company donated the steel and is funding most of the $36.5-million US project, maintains there is no place for the ceremonial flame atop the tower.

"It's strange if there are no ties to the Olympic cauldron, to make sure when the flame was lit for the entirety it could be seen all around from an open area," said Anna-Maria Sponaski, a native of Vancouver.

Keep Watch on the name game

Movie titles. Richard Crouse looks at the long history of studios and TV stations forced to change the names of films and shows

IN FOCUS

Richard Crouse
scene@metronews.ca

This weekend a movie called The Watch is opening in theatres. The Ben Stiller comedy was originally called Neighborhood Watch but the February, 2012 shooting of Trayvon Martin by a neighborhood watch coordinator in Florida led to the change.

In a statement, 20th Century Fox said, "As the subject matter of this alien invasion comedy bears no relation whatsoever to the recent tragic events in Florida, the studio altered the title to avoid any accidental or unintended misimpression that it might."

The sad incident that prompted the name change was unusual, but title tweaking is commonplace in Hollywood.

Sometimes moniker modification happens for practical reasons.

In the early stages of development, American Pie was known as Teenage Sex Comedy That Can Be Made For Under $10 Million That Your Reader Will Love. But The Executive Will Hate. That unwieldy name got the attention of Universal Studios who changed it to East Great Falls High and then Comfort Food before settling on American Pie.

The Tribal Rites of the New Saturday Night was also considered too long a name and changed to Saturday Night Fever, lifted from the Bee Gees song Night Fever.

A Roy Orbison song triggered the title of one of Julia Roberts's most famous movies.

Pretty Women went into production under the name 3,000, the amount Julia's working girl was paid for the night, but research showed audiences thought it sounded like the title of a sci-fi flick. Director Garry Marshall settled on the Orbison classic after listening to dozens of hit songs for inspiration.

Occasionally titles are changed to avoid confusion with other projects. Goodfellas was called Wiseguy but changed so as not to be mistaken for the Ken Wahl television series. The Real World was the working title for Reality Bites, but was altered when MTV began airing a reality show of the same name.

One of the most famous James Bond titles was improved by a typo.

The story of a villain who creates the next day's headlines and then causes them to come true was called Tomorrow Never Lies, but when a marketing executive mistakenly typed Tomorrow Never Dies in a memo the mistake was deemed more catchy and commercial.

Finally, would you see a movie called Do Androids Dream of Electric Sheep? Marketers didn't think so and called it Blade Runner instead.

How about The Last First Kiss? That one became the Will Smith movie Hitch.

Polley's conflicting stories

A new documentary directed by Oscar-nominated Canadian Sarah Polley will debut at the Venice Film Festival. Produced by the National Film Board, Stories We Tell finds the Toronto filmmaker investigating the secrets behind a family of storytellers. Polley uses playful interviews with the family to explore their candid yet contradictory answers to the same questions. Thirty-three-year-old Polley's last film, Take This Waltz, starred Michelle Williams and Seth Rogen and premiered at last year's Toronto International Film Festival. She was nominated for an Oscar for writing her 2006 drama Away From Her. The Venice fest runs Aug. 29 to Sept. 8 and will open with Indian director's Mira Nair's The Reluctant Fundamentalist.

Matt Damon says there's a sense of fury in the U.S. over banking scandals and financial inequality that neither Democrats nor Republicans are addressing in their presidential campaigns.

The 41-year-old actor made his comments at Comic-Con in San Diego, where he was promoting the sci-fi thriller Elysium, about a future in which the ultra-rich escape a dying Earth to live in a poverty-free, illness-free orbiting habitat. Damon said he expects President Obama to be elected to a second term in November but isn't as staunch a supporter as he once was.

"I'd be shocked if (Mitt) Romney won. You know, I think Obama is the clear choice. But I've said before I'm really disappointed in him, and I am, particularly because of the banking stuff. He so misread that," Damon said.

"That sense of unfair — the sense that we don't have a country anymore when people don't feel like they have a chance, like it's going to be fair ... If people feel like the deck is stacked against them, then they stop playing by the rules. Because why play by the rules? The game is fixed, right?"

Damon said both parties haven't paid enough attention to the Occupy movement.

Madonna being criticized in wake of Colorado shooting

Madonna is coming under fire for using fake guns in her stage show just days after the Aurora, Colo., movie theater massacre, according to the Daily Mail.

The singer was reportedly warned by police before her first performance in Scotland not to use the props, but did so anyway.

The fake guns used in the show include replicas of an AK47 assault rifle and a few handguns.

"Madonna and her dancers using replica guns was always in bad taste, but given what happened in Colorado it is even worse. She should know better," a spokesperson for Mothers Against Guns tells the newspaper.

But a source close to Madonna insists the singer is just sticking to her principles.

"Madonna would rather cancel her show than censor her art," the source tells the Huffington Post.

THE WORD

Although Madonna is practically begging for someone to complain about her racy MDNA tour, it's Katy Perry who has found herself in legal trouble stemming from an April performance in India.

It seems the singer invited cricket player Doug Bollinger on stage to demonstrate how to hold a cricket bat, and the lesson — which involved Bollinger smuggling up behind Perry and grabbing her below-the-waist microphone — offended a lawyer in the audience enough to file a complaint.

In the case, which will be heard July 31, the lawyer claims that the gesture was "obscene and lascivious" and "distracted students who were writing exams at the time," according to The Sun.

Listen, guys — you're overreacting here. Katy Perry has drenched us with icing from her spinning cupcake bra, and our country's education system is totally fine.

Absolutely nothing to worry about, we promise.

While Katherine Jackson may no longer be considered a missing person, her grandchildren still reportedly haven't been able to reach the 82-year-old, according to Us Weekly.

Katherine's son Jermaine insists that she's resting in Arizona on doctor's orders, while other family members are crying foul. Michael Jackson's 14-year-old daughter, Paris, in particular, "is a wreck and wants her grandma back immediately," a source says, adding that Paris and her brothers haven't spoken with the grandmother and legal guardian in more than a week.

"It is a war between family members. Paris is broken-hearted about what is happening and has begged the family to call a truce to allow her grandma back."

Katherine Jackson

The executors of Michael Jackson's estate say they are concerned about the welfare of the singer's mother and his three children amid a family feud.

In a letter posted on fan sites Tuesday, executors John Branca and John McClain say they are doing what they can to protect those family members from "undue influences, bullying, greed, and other unfortunate circumstances."

The currents in the river make it impossible to swim at Montreal's Clock Tower Beach. PAUL CHIASSON/THE CANADIAN PRESS

Hit the beach – but forget the swimming

Montreal. Sandy haven in city's Old Port is a great place for catching rays; just don't plan to take a dip

It sounded funny at first — a beach at Montreal's Old Port where there's no swimming.

But the scene is actually quite striking. Visitors can bury their feet in soft white sand as they gaze out at city landmarks and a parade of boats going up and down the St. Lawrence River.

Within view are the towering old Molson brewery, the steel trusses of Jacques-Cartier Bridge, and La Ronde, the city's offshore amusement park.

The river's strong current ruled out the possibility of making the beach open to swimming, and the closest sunbathers can get to water are the mist showers. So far, though, the new Clock Tower Beach has been a hit.

"I never thought it would be nice like this," said 65-year-old Pauline Angers, who lives just outside Montreal, as she sipped a juice under a parasol.

"It's lovely. There are so many places with pools, but you don't see this everywhere."

Located on a quay at the city's Old Port, the beach is named after the giant clock tower that stands at the water's edge, alongside a marina filled with motorboats and yachts.

It opened in mid-June, joining dozens of other nearby attractions at what has long been the city's tourist headquarters.

Visitors can amble along the boardwalk or turn into Old Montreal, where outdoor patio restaurants and artists showcasing their works line the cobblestone streets.

There are so many things to do and see — boat cruises, calèche rides, a kid-friendly science centre, a Cirque du soleil performance — that the beach may get passed over by many visitors.

That's not the case for nearby resident Jessica Diano, who decided to get a season's pass.

"I love it," said Diano, 30, as she sunbathed with three friends. "At first it was weird to not have the option to swim, but I don't mind."

In the evening, there's a refreshment stand at the beach offering food and drinks, providing a prime spot to watch fireworks during the summer months. The space may be a little less welcoming to children.

On a recent weekend afternoon, there were a few dozen people at the beach, but only a handful of kids. Without a pool, there's little for them to do but play with sand toys and cool off in the mist showers.

"I think if someone makes a trip specifically for this, I'm not sure if it's worth it," said Marco Quirion, who had biked to the beach from a Montreal suburb with his partner and two kids.

Angers disagrees. She has already made several trips to the beach since it opened and plans to return. She said it's a great place to find a quiet haven just steps from the buzz of the city.

"Normally, you have to travel to find sand like this," she said.

Sleep in a London cab during the Olympics

A London taxi driver has come up with a novel way of solving the Olympic hotel dilemma: Visitors can sleep in his cab for $78. Cabbie David Weekes had feared that busy traffic throughout the Olympics and special road lanes for Olympic VIPs would mean fewer taxi fares. So he's converted his traditional black London taxi into a cozy single bed with a Union Jack blanket.

Weekes said some London taxi drivers think working during the Olympics will be "a total waste of time" because of the congestion. But others like himself will be driving during the games, which run from July 27 to Aug. 12.

The bulk of the Sydney Games in 2000 took place at Sydney Olympic Park, a short train ride from the city's centre. The opening and closing ceremonies were held in what is now ANZ Stadium. As part of the tour, you can pose for photos standing on a medal stand — take your pick of gold, silver or bronze. An extended, pricier Gantry Tour takes you high above the field along steel mesh walkways used by crews to access lighting and sound equipment. Track and field events also took place there, though the actual track used was rolled up like a carpet and moved to the warm-up area of the nearby Athletic Centre. You don't have to go to London to enjoy the Olympics. Many venues used for past Olympic Games are still stand-

If you're taking a trip to a city with an Olympic past, you might want to fit in a visit to the Olympic stadium or museum. Here are some places to consider:

Beijing's iconic Bird's Nest and Water Cube facilities are now open to visitors.

The National Stadium was the site of the opening and closing ceremonies, track and field events and soccer and is notable for its architecture — steel "twigs" on the outside form a massive, curving nest. See n-s.cn/en.

The National Aquatics Center, where Michael Phelps won eight golds in 2008, is dubbed the Water Cube for its blue, bubble-like exterior. It's a water park these days. Details are at water-cube.com, though you might need an online translating service to read

Redpath Sugar Museum: The sweetest place in Toronto

Richard Feltoe is the curator at the Redpath Sugar Museum.

TORY ZIMMERMAN/TORSTAR NEWS SERVICE

City landmark. Learn a little about Canada's oldest sugar refining company — and watch the boats come in from the Caribbean and nutrition. Redpath Sugar was started by John Redpath, a stonemason who immigrated from Scotland to Montreal and became one of the largest building contractors in Canada.

Before he got going with the sugar business at age 57 in 1854, he was involved in the building of Montreal's General Hospital, Notre-Dame Basilica and parts of McGill University.

But it was the work he did on a transportation network that included the Lachine and Rideau canals that opened up the interior of Canada. The Redpath Sugar factory was located on the banks of the Lachine. But by 1900, the canal was too narrow to accommodate ocean-going vessels.

"They began looking for an alternate facility and picked the Toronto waterfront which was being infilled at that time. The plant was constructed between 1957 to 1959 to coincide with the opening of St. Lawrence Seaway, which allowed large ocean-going vessels to reach Toronto. And that's why we are here today," Feltoe explains.

Agave-BBQ Roasted Chicken: All the sweet taste, none of the hangover

Agave nectar — the current darling of the alternative sweetener world — is made from the same plant that is used to produce tequila. And it goes down so much easier (squeeze of lime and dash of salt are optional).

But let's start with some basics. Agave nectar is an amber liquid that resembles honey, but has a cleaner, sweeter, even fruitier flavour. Not long ago it was mostly unheard of in North America, existing primarily in the backwaters of the natural foods world.

In recent years, it has evolved into a booming $200 million industry. Suddenly, it's being used in everything from ketchup and barbecue sauce to baked goods and ice cream.

Here it's used to make a delicious roasted chicken.

1. Heat the oven to 400 F.

2. Place chicken on cutting board with breast down. Use kitchen shears to cut from neck hole down the length of the backbone and out the rump. Repeat on the other side of the backbone. Discard the backbone. The cutting will require a little effort, but the shears should cut through the bones without too much difficulty. Spread open the chicken, exposing the cavity.

3. Sprinkle inside with salt and pepper. Overturn the chicken and place it cavity side down in a roasting pan just a bit larger than the chicken. Gently press the chicken to flatten. Season over and under the skin with salt and pepper. Cover tightly with foil and roast for 30 minutes.

4. Meanwhile, prepare the barbecue sauce. In a medium

Ingredients

- 3- to 5-lb whole chicken
- Kosher salt and black pepper

- 6-oz can tomato paste
- 5 tbsp agave syrup
- 3 tbsp olive oil
- 5 tbsp cider vinegar
- 1 1/2 tbsp Dijon mustard
- 1 tsp kosher salt
- 2 tsp ground cumin
- 1 tsp cinnamon
- 1 tsp garlic powder
- 1 tsp Worcestershire sauce
- 1/2 tsp black pepper

bowl, whisk together all ingredients. Set aside.

5. After the chicken has roasted for 30 minutes, remove the pan from the oven and remove the foil. Use a pastry brush to brush the barbecue sauce thickly over the entire chicken. Return the chicken to the oven and roast for another 30 minutes, or until the meat at the thickest part reaches 165 F.

Orange-Lemon-Lime Tea-Ade

- 8 bags black tea
- 4 bags mint tea
- 6 cups boiling water
- 3/4 cup sugar
- Ice
- Juice of 4 oranges
- Juice of 2 lemons and 2 limes

In a 1-gallon pitcher, combine the black tea bags, mint tea bags and boiling water. Let steep for 5 minutes. Use a slotted spoon to remove the tea bags, squeezing them over the pitcher to extract as much liquid as possible. Add the sugar, stirring until it is dissolved. Stir in the orange, lemon and lime juices, then add enough ice to fill the pitcher.

Finally, a salad jammed with healthy veggies and flavour

Ingredients

Chicken

- 1 tsp olive oil
- 2 tbsp red wine vinegar
- 1/2 tsp salt
- 1/2 tsp ground black pepper
- 2 cloves garlic, minced
- 1 lb chicken breast cutlets

The Greens

- 5-oz package mixed spring greens
- 2 tbsp chopped fresh chives
- 3 tbsp each chopped cilantro leaves, torn basil leaves, chopped parsley
- 1 tbsp minced fresh mint

Vinaigrette

- 1/4 cup rice wine vinegar
- 2 tsp sugar
- 1 tsp salt
- Pinch of allspice and ground cloves

- 1/4 cup chopped shallots
- 2 tsp Dijon mustard
- 1 tbsp olive oil

Chopped Vegetables

- 2 ears corn, husked
- 2 tomatillos, husked and halved
- 2 medium apples, cored and chopped
- 1 cup peeled and chopped jicama
- 1 red bell pepper, cored and chopped

1. Chicken: In zip-close plastic bag, combine olive oil, wine vinegar, salt, pepper and garlic. Add chicken, then massage marinade into meat. Refrigerate for 2 hours or overnight.

2. Greens: In bowl, combine mixed greens, chives, cilantro, basil, parsley and mint. Cover with plastic wrap and refrigerate for 2 hours or overnight.

3. When ready to cook chicken, prepare the vinaigrette. In a small saucepan over medium-high heat, combine the rice wine vinegar, sugar, salt, allspice, cloves and shallots. Bring to a simmer and cook for 5 minutes. Remove from the heat and let cool. Whisk in the mustard and olive oil.

4. Heat the grill to high. Using an oil-soaked paper towel held with tongs, oil the grill grates.

5. Add the chicken, both ears of corn and the tomatillos to the grill. The chicken should grill for 2 to 3 minutes per side. The corn should grill for about the same time, but with frequent turning to seal all sides. The tomatillos should be grilled for the same duration, cut side down. Transfer the vegetables to a plate to cool.

Let the sun shine on your search

The heat of the hunt.

Rebuild your summer job search momentum as August approaches

LEAH RUEHLICKE
TalentEgg.ca

It's late-July and you're still having no luck on the summer job front. You've slowly fallen into the swing of sleeping until noon and sitting poolside for the afternoon with a pitcher of Sangria in hand, completely giving up on the idea of making any sort of income over the summer months.

However, just because the July heat is making you melt doesn't mean your motivation has to melt along with it. These steps can help you transform your lazy summer days into productive ones while still leaving time for an afternoon beer on the patio.

Shed the PIs

Get up early and go for a run before the heat kicks in. Get dressed. Eat a full breakfast. Doing these things sets you in gear and makes it much less likely for you to spend the day lounging.

Manage your time

Making cold calls, revamping your résumé and writing thank you notes after interviews don't sound like a fun ways to spend your afternoon.

Try setting a timer for 15 minutes, three times a day and doing something you don't want to do during those three intervals. The time will fly by and you'll accomplish more by working hard for short periods of time.

Share the love

See a job posting that would be perfect for your other unemployed friend? Hear an ad for something your younger cousin could try out? Let them know about it. Helping others succeed will motivate you to do so as well. Not only that, but passing along

Have you noticed a position that wouldn't sync with your skills? Wipe that frown off your face and pass the info on to a qualified pal. iSTOCK information encourages others to do the same for you and allows you to network without even trying.

A good deed a day keeps

Make dinner. Organize your mom's bookshelf. (I did that and she threw me a 20. Just sayin'.) Not only will others appreciate this, but the more things you do the more motivated you will be to continue being productive with your time. Half the battle is simply getting out of a lazy funk.

Put your mind at ease

Pick one thing that is really troubling you and brainstorm ways to deal with it. For example, if you're stressing about how to foot your rent cheques for the school year, get on your student loan application. Examine your class schedule to see if you can fit in a part-time job for the fall. Create a budget. Getting your worries under control one at a time will make the bigger picture less stressful overall.

Get creative

Use your imagination

- If you're feeling desperate for some dough, think of ways to raise it in without relying on a job. Donate items from your overflowing closet to a consignment store. See if your neighbours need any odd jobs done. Call your local employment centre to see if they have any temp jobs you could apply for. Accessing all your outlets may bring forth results you didn't even consider before.

- Slowly building up your momentum and making your days more productive will keep you feeling positive and make you more successful in your search!

So you've beefed up your résumé, networked with everyone from your next door neighbour to your college professors, and applied all over town, but somehow, it's July and the most work you've gotten has been the few dollars your parents threw to you for clearing out the shed.

If you're still on the hunt for summer work and employers aren't biting, it may be time to cast a wider net.

Why you should widen your summer job search

Widening your summer job search takes a shift in perspective. Give some thought to why you need a summer job so badly. Is it for the money? Is it for the experience? Is it for your résumé? Your answers to these questions will help determine how broad your search should be and what jobs you could be applying to.

The positions you get may not be your dream job but with the right attitude, they may be just what your summer needs.

Transferable skills

Though these summer jobs may not be what you want to do long term, the skills can "transfer" to future positions in your desired field. As a liberal arts student who liked

As I was about to graduate I had not found a full-time job that was relevant to my education or my future goals. The process of finding a relevant job took me six months.

Luckily, I had been working at Rogers Communications part-time throughout school and continued working there while searching for a full-time job. I understood that the market was competitive and decided to differentiate myself by pursuing my Certified Associate of Project Management (CAPM) designation through the Project Management Institute, which I successfully obtained.

Aside from this, I spent many hours reviewing job listings, applying for jobs and learning about career search strategies.

Where I am now
I currently work at Ingram Micro as a Licensing Coordinator. My short-term goal is to pursue a MBA at a reputable business school in September 2013.

My recommendations for employers, schools and career centres

My recommendation to schools and career centres is to invest time and resources in the professional development of students at least in the fourth year. Many students graduate with exceptional grades and are left hanging in regards to job search and networking strategies. Schools also need to develop solid partnerships with employers in the community so students get exposure to these organizations.

The biggest challenge I faced was that employers required corporate experience for entry-level jobs. Employers need to understand that, although for obvious reasons some recent graduates may not have corporate experience, graduates can definitely contribute through their education, their part-time work experience and through their extra-curricular experience. Like many students, I invested a lot of time into extra-curricular activities while in school. Employers should appreciate this and understand that students can apply the skills they obtained through their experience to the job.

My recommendations for students

Get involved in extra-curricular activities or volunteer as early as you can. This will allow you to develop new skills and will differentiate you from your peers.

Furthermore, network as much as you can. Attend networking sessions, information sessions and any relevant career centre events. Develop solid relationships with your professors. They have a lot of experience and tips that they would love to share with you.

Lastly, do not lose hope. Always keep your goals in mind and do whatever it takes to achieve them.

Cataractes D-man sorry for damaging trophy

CHL. Shawinigan's Donnelly will have to pay for repairs to Memorial Cup, team general manager says said: "Breaking the Memorial Cup was an accident. I picked it up, lost my balance and dropped it. There was no intention to break. I'm sorry."

The junior hockey championship trophy looked like a wreck in pictures published this week. The metal cup at the top was bashed in and the wooden base was cracked. Each player on the championship team is allowed 24 hours to celebrate with the cup at home, provided the team takes out $50,000 in insurance against damages.

Cataractes general manager Martin Mondou said Donnelly will have to pay.

"You have to be responsible for your behaviour," he said.

Mondou had not yet spoken

Shawinigan Cataractes defenceman Dillon Donnelly has apologized for damaging the Memorial Cup and said it was an accident.

But the son of former NHL rearguard Gord Donnelly will be billed for the repairs by the Quebec Major Junior Hockey League team.

The 19-year-old Colorado Avalanche prospect sent a message on Twitter on Tuesday that

Replica

- The damaged one is a replica, but can cost thousands of dollars to repair when badly damaged.

to Donnelly about the damages, but said the issue "will be resolved between us, the league and the kid. Nobody else."

Two figurines of hockey players on either side of the cup were missing, but they fell off long before Donnelly had the trophy on July 13 in Montreal. Mondou said the figurines came off twice when the team was presented the cup following their victory on home ice in the final against the London Knights in May.

The Canadian Hockey League, the umbrella group for the three Canadian-based major junior leagues, has asked that the cup be returned immediately to Toronto.

Some Cataractes players who had not yet had their day with the cup will miss their turn, said Photi Sotopoulos, spokesman for the Quebec Major Junior Hockey League.

He said the team is held responsible for the cup, not any individual players.

NHLPA is close to making its CBA counter-proposal

The NHL Players' Association is almost ready to table its own vision for a new collective bargaining agreement.

As negotiations with the NHL resumed Tuesday, NHLPA executive director Donald Fehr indicated that the union was getting close to responding to the league's initial proposal, which included a decreased share of hockey-related revenue, term limits on contracts and a 22 per cent salary rollback.

"I doubt that it will be weeks plural," said Fehr. "But could it be two? Yeah. It could be two, it could be less."

The sides have entered gently into talks. This week's three-day session in Toronto marks the fifth consecutive week Fehr and NHL commissioner Gary Bettman have sat across the table from one another, but they still seem to be feeling their way into the process.

The NHL delivered its initial CBA proposal to the union during a bargaining session on July 13. In response, the NHLPA requested a "fair amount of additional information," according to Fehr.

"They've indicated that they're in the process of compiling it and will get it to us," Fehr said.

History meets rock 'n' roll at venue

Canada's Olympic men's beach volleyball team practises Tuesday at a venue situated behind the Horse Guard Parade building in London. RYAN REMIORZ/THE CANADIAN PRESS

Beach volleyball.

Canadian players are savouring the opportunity to play at a site in the shadows of historic buildings

AC/DC, Led Zeppelin and the Beach Boys blared Tuesday as Canadians hit the sand to train in what will likely become one of the London Olympics' most iconic venues.

The beach volleyball venue is set in the shadow of the Horse Guard Parade, a site that dates back to 1745 and takes its name from the soldiers who have provided protection for the monarch since 1660.

It is perhaps best known for the annual Trooping the Colour event that takes place on the Queen's birthday.

But for 13 days starting Saturday, it will be a rock 'n' roll sandbox filled with athletic beefcake and hard-bodied women in itsy-bisty bikinis.

It's a sport that is the antithesis of golf — fans are encouraged to rock out. The beach party takes place in an intimate, temporary stadium that seats 15,000 and wraps around a court stocked with some 5,000 tonnes of sand brought from a quarry in Godstone, Surrey.

"It's amazing," said Marie-Andree Lessard, sporting a huge grin. "It's so vibrant. The sand's beautiful. The colour's awesome. The site is of utmost beauty and of great historic value as well. So I think we're very grateful and happy to be playing here."

Martin Reader added: "Beautiful venue. Amazing place in London."

The venue is sure to become one of the indelible television images of the Games, especially from high in the stands that face the Horse Guard Parade building.

But the entire site is packed with history. Surrounding buildings include the Old Admiralty Building, Household Cavalry Museum, Scotland Office and St. James's Park.

The Duke of Wellington was based in Horse Guards when he was in charge of the British army.

Both the Canadian men and women open on the weekend against host nation Britain.

The Canadian men had to win in Mexico to get Canada an Olympic spot.

"There were a few thousand Mexican fans yelling not the nicest things at us," said Reader's partner, Josh Binstock. "But we relish that. I love playing the spoiler, I love being the bad guy. Of course, I love being supported and loved but either way it's fun having that pressure on us."

After Mexico, the duo had to defeat a rival pair to book their ticket to London.

Given that only happened July 14 for both pairs, it made for a whirlwind week before the men headed to Austria to refocus on the Games.

"Literally the moment after we won, we were just getting pulled (from all sides)," said Binstock. "And that lasted for the whole week. I don't remember just sitting down and enjoying a meal the whole week."

Non-toxic metal rescue

Removing rust with a wire brush, sandpaper or a grinder is tedious, the rust dust is really bad for you and these abrasive techniques will alter the surface shape of your part. Now there's Metal Rescue to handle the chore. Claimed to be a water-based, non-toxic and acid-free product, Metal Rescue is a liquid bath for metal parts. After scraping away the big chunks (which shortens the bath time), you simply immerse the item(s) to be cleaned in the pre-mixed solution. The length of time needed depends on the size of the item and how badly rusted it is. Then rise and let dry. Metal Rescue sells for $25 US for a one-gallon (3.8-litre) bucket, or $90 for a five-gallon (18.9-litre) container. Check out the demonstration videos and place your order at metalrescue.com.

More space

Dimensionally, the five-passenger Santa Fe is similar to the 2012 Santa Fe, as both have identical distance between the front and rear wheels. The upcoming seven-passenger Santa Fe, however, is about 21.5 centimetres longer overall and has 16 per cent more cargo space behind the second-row seat.

AWD system

Hyundai will allow you to match your selected engine with its latest all-wheel-drive setup. The system includes what Hyundai calls Torque Vectoring Corner Control (TVCC) that continuously monitors driving conditions and can instantly direct the correct amount of power or braking force to any single wheel at a time.

2013 Hyundai Santa Fe

- Type: Four-door, front-/all-wheel-drive wagon.
- Engines (hp): 2.4-litre DOHC I4 (190); 2.0-litre DOHC I4, turbocharged (264); 3.3-litre DOHC V6 (290).
- Mileage: L/100 km (city/hwy) 10.4/7.0 (2.4, est.).
- Base Price: $26,000 (est.).

Engines

The seven-passenger Santa Fe is understandably heftier than the five-passenger — by more than 180 kilograms, actually — which explains why its sole powerplant is a 290-horsepower 3.3-litre V6 that replaces the previously optional 274-horsepower 3.5-litre V6.

Conversely, the five-passenger model, now lighter than the outgoing Santa Fe by an impressive 121 kilograms, can be had with a base 190-horsepower 2.4-litre four-cylinder, or an optional 264-horsepower 2.0-litre turbocharged four-cylinder.

Regardless of your chosen engine, a six-speed automatic transmission with manual shift controls is all that's offered.

So, two sizes of the 2013 Hyundai Santa Fe are on the menu. It seems familiar.

Second Gear.

2006 to 2011
Honda Civic

JUSTIN
drive@metronews.ca

For 2012, the Honda Civic entered its latest generation — leaving the previous 2006 to 2011 model range in used-car territory.

The last-gen Civic was a best-seller available to Canadian shoppers in two or four-door body styles and with a range of powertrain options to suit a variety of needs. All models brought Honda's promise of reliable performance and high resale values to the compact car segment. Compact cars don't get much more sensible than this.

Common Issues

The Civic has a fantastic reputation for reliability, but a few precautionary checks should be considered mandatory.

A handful of owners have reported premature head-gasket failure under warranty. This problem could be pricey if not covered by warranty — so check your potential used Civic for signs of head-gasket problems to be sure. Ask a mechanic for help if you're unsure how.

Earlier models in this generation may suffer from a potential engine block crack as well. Like the head-gasket issue, this seems rare — but a quick check for coolant or oil leaks should be made, just to be safe.

Owners have also complained of premature tire and brake wear — check these components as well.

Finally, listen to the suspension closely for clunking or popping sounds over bumps, which could indicate a suspension problem.

TORSTAR NEWS SERVICE

Engine

Standard Civic models were powered by a 1.8-litre, 140-horsepower VTEC engine paired to a five-speed transmission in automatic or manual.

What Owners Like

Build quality, gas mileage, reliability, generous storage facilities and an all-around easy-to-drive character were all rated highly. Handling and ride quality are commented upon positively. Comfortable seats and the clever digital speedometer are also typically loved.

What Owners Dislike

Some wish for more power, a richer, more upscale interior, a quieter ride, and a repositioned handbrake lever — which can dig into the knees of long-legged drivers.

Verdict

If the checks mentioned come back negative, you're well on your way to joining the large and satisfied Civic owner's community.

A lesson in automotive finance

Autopilot

AUTO
PILOT
Mike Goetz
drive@metronews.ca

Before I launch into a revealing auto finance comparison from Statistics Canada, and possibly lose your attention for good, here's a short bit from comedian Steven Wright: "I had parked in a tow-away zone, and when I got back, the entire neighbourhood was gone."

In 2007, only 6.4 per cent of buyers in Canada purchased a new vehicle with a payment term of 72 months or greater. Today, 40 per cent of buyers finance their vehicle over six years or more.

There was a time when you couldn't even finance a vehicle for more than three years. More and more of us are spreading the cost of a vehicle purchase over longer and longer periods of time.

Is this a good trend? Probably not.

And this is not me lecturing about money matters, 'cause that would be like Donald Trump scolding other guys about comb-overs.

Instead, consider the auto industry analysts over at J.D. Power and Associates, who recently noted one of the prime pitfalls of longer term financing — the greater potential for buyers to find themselves in a not-so-nice credit position known as "under water."

Another term for it is "negative equity." Whatever you call it, it's a scenario where the buyer owes more on the loan than the vehicle is worth. Basically, it's a case of your car loan payments not even keeping up with the vehicle's depreciation, which can happen when you stretch the term out so long, to 72 months and beyond, to keep monthly payments as low as they can possibly go.

In 2007, 17 per cent of car deals were "under water," compared with 26 per cent today.

This is obviously not a huge problem if you plan to keep the car forever, or even just past the finance period. But should you find yourself needing to sell or trade the vehicle sooner, well... then you'll be out of pocket for the difference between what the car is worth and how much you still owe on it.

Also note that the longer the finance term, the more interest you'll pay in total. In 2007, when the average car loan was four years, the average total cost of a vehicle loan was 107 per cent of the purchase price. J.D. Power notes that owing to today's extended payment terms, the average total finance cost has risen to 114 per cent of the purchase price.

Vehicle purchases continue to take a bigger slice of our disposable income. In the biz, that slice is known as "share of wallet." But monthly payment amounts on new-vehicles have been basically flat since 2007, when the average payment was $528. J.D. Power figures consumers — and dealers — are using those long-term loan instruments, to keep a lid on automobile's "share of wallet," at least on a monthly basis.

With so much focus on monthly payment schedules, J.D. Power also argues that, "...the MSRP has become irrelevant to new-vehicle buyers. Today's vehicle buyers will trade tomorrow's total cost, in order to balance the monthly checkbook."

Again, we're not lecturing. You're definitely the master of your own "share of wallet," more or less...

While longer finance terms can look very appealing, it could come back to bite you in the future. iSTOCK
